Peter Lee counsels a broad range of clients in the electrical and computer arts in both the United States and internationally. With his extensive experience prosecuting patents, litigating patent cases, and managing post grant proceedings before the Patent Trial and Appeal Board, Peter offers his clients a full range of patent portfolio management tools.

Peter's practice includes preparing and prosecuting patents in the automobile, industrial, financial, consumer electronics, and medical devices sectors. In particular, Peter has prepared and prosecuted patent applications related to management of big data, AI, and machine learning applications. Peter also has experience in the fields of high efficiency video coding compression technology for submission into standard pools, as well as consumer electronics such as printers, set top boxes, smartphones, and displays. Peter has also been part of patent litigation teams, and managed all phases of numerous post grant review proceedings, advocating for his client in this important new venue made available after the AIA.

With his prior career as a patent examiner and working abroad in S. Korea, Peter's collective experiences give him a unique perspective from which he is able to draw from when counseling his clients. He also prides himself in taking a practical, hands on approach to client counseling, by working directly with clients to develop patent protection, enforcement, and avoidance strategies.

Thinking forward, Peter strives to clearly understand a client's business so that he may provide the tactics and strategies to become an integral asset in achieving the client's business goals.
